You can't drink at this church service, but you can definitely learn about the social aspect of imbibing. / RIKARD LARMA, METRO, ISTOCKPHOTO

It's heaven on earth: Service focuses on beer

Worship. A local First Unitarian man is holding a church service dedicated to craft beer this summer.

With the proliferation of local craft brewers producing quality small batch beverages, there are plenty of Philadelphians who would likely say they worship at the altar of beer.

But Dane Wells is taking the metaphor to a new level. The avid ale aficionado and active worshipper will hold a service at Philadelphia's First Unitarian Church dedicated to the sudsy stuff — literally.

Wells said he understands that some people may have reservations about the unconventional pairing. "However, what I'm discussing is what I would call beer as a social relaxant — and there is a social connotation of beer," he said. "If somebody comes up to you and says, 'Let's discuss this over a beer,' the picture that comes to mind is of a very convivial meeting with everybody on equal footing."

The ethos of equality is embodied by the craft beer revolution that began sweeping the country in the mid-'80s, according to Wells.

"It's an amazing movement, and this social connotation has rubbed off on the way that small brewers do business," he said. "I think there are lessons to learn in how we operate in society from these brewers. They're being very successful doing small, quality products. They're not gunning for market shares; they're gunning for something they feel is good beer."

Though he's a lay member, Wells periodically leads services at the Unitarian Church, which espouses no official creed but encourages parishioners to explore interests.

Wells approached congregation officials after learning that the American Homebrewers Association, in which he previously served as a certified beer judge, will this summer hold its annual national conference in Philadelphia. "I think there are things you have to examine, when you look around and they inspire you to do things a certain way," he said.

"Frankly, the craft beer movement has tremendous inspirational points to it. Why not discuss them? First Unitarians are a very liberal denomination, and they are more open to discussing lots of things you don't normally hear in church."

"I think if we picked up some of these lessons of conviviality and equality and moved them out of the world of beer and into other realms, the world would be a happier, better place to live. My solution to the United Nations is to set up a beer tent — everything would go a lot easier."

BOLARIS VISION

THANK GOODNESS FOR LITTLE GIRLS

I'd like to wish all the fathers out there a belated Happy Father's Day.

My daughter is 9 years old and she is truly a gift from heaven. Is there anything better in life than having your little girl by your side? I'm sure having a son feels just the same, but I can only speak from a father with an extraordinary relationship with his little girl, Reina Sofia.

My first memory was her birth — that was amazing. It was 5 p.m., Feb. 27, 2004. Now in the TV news business we're in, that's what we call sweeps. My news director at the time at CBS-TV in N.Y. let me have the 5 and 6 p.m. newscasts off. But if labor extended into the 11 p.m. newscast, they wanted me back in the anchor seat.

During her delivery, I decided to put on not the Weather Channel, but the Golf Channel. My reasoning for this logic was to help my love at the time get into a rhythm. You know, nice and slow pushes with the iron, then get out the big dog, the driver, and go for it! (Push real hard.) To me, this unorthodox approach worked as the delivery went as smoothly as a Phil Mickelson follow through.

Quoted

Is there anything better in life than having your little girl by your side?

The pediatrician and Tiffany McElroy, the mother of our child, thought differently. She kind of looked at me cross-eyed when I pointed to the Golf Channel and was trying to connect the two. The pure excitement of the birth and cutting the umbilical cord took away any penalty strokes I might have received. When I held my little girl for the very first time, I cried as it took my breath away.

And some of the things that will always make my heart melt — changing her diaper for the first time; the first time she was able to pull herself up in the crib and then turned around and smiled at me; that pure, sweet baby's breath when they fall asleep in the nape of your neck. My first daddy-to-daughter serious talk (she was 7): "Daddy, I hear you're a bachelor, you know, wifeless, and when I go to UCLA you will be all alone." On that note ,I'll see what I can do. Thank you to my daughter for making all the negative melt away and for feeling a love like no other. By the way, I did make the 11 p.m. newscast that night. I had to. It was sweeps.

Happy Father's Day.

Round 2: School district slashes 76 more jobs

Deeper cuts. In its effort to fill a $304 million budget gap, the school district eliminates even more jobs.

The first round slashed 3,783. The second round cut 76 more.

The School District of Philadelphia announced additional layoffs Friday. Sixty-three worked at the district headquarters on North Broad Street. Thirteen were cut from early childhood education programs in regional administrative offices.

Overall, 137 positions are slated to be eliminated, which includes 61 vacant positions.

The district, which suffers from a $304 million budget deficit, expects the new cuts to save $23 million.

For the 2014 fiscal year, the central administration budget will comprise 2.3 percent of the district's.

"In total, the school-based, regional and central administrative office reductions represent 19.9 percent of the current 19,530-member workforce," according to a news release. "Overall, the school district has seen a 34.3 percent reduction in staff since 2011, including a 44.6 percent reduction from central administration."

What's cut?

As as result of the cutbacks:

- Drivers education ends
- Live-streaming School Reform Commission hearings end
- Less admins to field calls or catalog student records

The district still seeks $60 million from the city, $120 million from the state and about $130 million from union concessions.

Contractor lied about roof fall: cops

A roofing contractor was arrested Saturday for allegedly lying about an accident.

Police said a man, 38, was replacing segments of the roof at an apartment complex on the 8800 block of Krewstown Road when he fell through the roof and into an apartment shortly after 11 a.m., landing on a couch.

The man was uninjured, but parts of the roof struck a 12-year-old girl who was lying on the floor watching television.

Roofing contractor owner John Paul Kravchak, 60, told officers he was the person who fell through the roof, according to police. He was arrested and charged with making false reports to law enforcement. METRO

Hundreds of thousands attend rally for Erdogan

People gather during a rally at the Kazlicesma parade ground in Istanbul yesterday to listen to a speech by Turkish Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan. / GETTY IMAGES

Speech. Erdogan said the rallies were to kick off campaigning for elections next year and not related to the protests.

Turkish Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan rallied hundreds of thousands of supporters at an Istanbul parade ground yesterday as riot police fired tear-gas several yards away in the city center to disperse anti-government protesters.

Erdogan told a sea of flag-waving supporters that two weeks of protests had been manipulated by "terrorists" and dismissed suggestions that he was behaving like a dictator, a constant refrain from those who have taken to the streets.

Riot police fired tear-gas into side streets around the central Taksim Square as he spoke, trying to prevent protesters from regrouping after hundreds were evicted from the adjoining Gezi Park, the center of the protests, late on Saturday.

"The attitude across Turkey with the pretext of Taksim's Gezi Park is not sincere. It is nothing more than the minority's attempt to dominate the majority. ... We could not have allowed this and we will not allow it," he said.

Bulldozers removed barricades and municipal workers swept the streets around Taksim that were sealed off by police yesterday after thousands took to the streets overnight following the raid by riot police firing tear-gas and water cannon.

The umbrella protest group behind the Gezi Park campaign, Taksim Solidarity, called for demonstrators to gather peacefully again in the square, but Istanbul Gov. Huseyin Avni Mutlu made clear they would not be allowed to do so.

"Any call for [people to gather in] Taksim will not contribute to peace and security," he told reporters, as riot police fired tear gas in several locations to disperse groups of demonstrators trying to reach the square. REUTERS

Turkish unions call one-day strike for today

Two Turkish union federations said yesterday they would stage a one-day nationwide strike today in protest at the forced eviction by riot police of hundreds of anti-government demonstrators from an Istanbul park.

The Confederation of Public Workers' Unions (KESK), which has some 240,000 members in 11 unions, and the Confederation of Revolutionary Trade Unions (DISK) announced the strike in a joint statement. Three other groups representing doctors, engineers and dentists will also join the action, it said.

White House chief: Location of leaker currently unknown

Step up. Senator Chambliss says Snowden ought to "look an American jury in the eye" and explain why.

White House Chief of Staff Denis McDonough said today that he doesn't know the whereabouts of Edward Snowden. The last known location of the admitted U.S. intelligence leaker was in Hong Kong.

McDonough, in an interview on CBS's "Face the Nation," declined to say whether there are plans to prosecute Snowden, a former government contractor.

Speaking on Fox News Sunday, former Vice President Dick Cheney defended the NSA programs, which began under former President George W. Bush, saying they have produced valuable intelligence in the global war on terrorism and have led to the disruption of planned attacks on the U.S.

Cheney said he was unaware of what, if anything, President Barack Obama did to alter the surveillance techniques.

"The program, obviously, from what's now been released, is still in operation," Cheney, 72, said. "I think it's good. I think it has saved lives and kept us free from other attacks."

McDonough said Obama will soon speak to the country about the surveillance programs, saying the president holds privacy "sacrosanct" and does not believe the surveillance efforts Snowden disclosed violate the privacy of any Americans.

"I think you will hear the president talk about this in the days ahead," McDonough said.

US spy agency paper says fewer than 300 phone numbers scrutinized

The government only searched for detailed information on calls involving fewer than 300 specific phone numbers among the millions of raw phone records collected by the National Security Agency in 2012, according to a government paper obtained by Reuters on Saturday.

The unclassified paper was circulated Saturday within the government by U.S. intelligence agencies and apparently is an attempt by spy agencies and the Obama administration to rebut accusations it overreached in investigating potential militant plots.

The paper circulated on Saturday said data from the NSA phone and email collections programs not only led U.S. investigators to the ringleader of a plot to attack New York's subway system in 2009, but also to one of his co-conspirators in the United States.

The paper discusses an NSA program that collects "metadata" — raw information that does not identify individual telephone subscribers — from major U.S. phone companies showing all calls made by those companies' subscribers to phones within the United States and overseas. REUTERS

Hope. Iranians count on president-elect to bring about change

Rohani is an Islamic Republic insider who has held senior political and military posts since the 1979 Islamic revolution and maintained a rapport with Khamenei, Iran's most powerful official.

Election of Iran's Rohani 'potentially hopeful'

U.S. President Barack Obama's chief of staff said the election of Iranian President Hassan Rohani was a "potentially hopeful sign," and that if he lived up to his obligation "to come clean on this illicit nuclear program, he will find a partner in us."

Speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," Denis McDonough said: "If he (Rohani) is interested in, as he has said in his campaign, mending Iran's relations with the rest of the world, there is an opportunity to do that." REUTERS

Dialogue. The offer came only days after North Korea abruptly canceled planned official talks with South Korea.

North Korea yesterday offered high-level talks with the United States to ease tensions on the Korean peninsula, but the White House said that any talks must involve Pyongyang taking action to show it is moving toward scrapping its nuclear weapons.

The North Korea National Defense Commission, in a statement carried by KCNA news agency yesterday, said Washington can pick a date and place for talks, and the two sides can discuss a range of issues, but no preconditions should be attached.

"In order to ease tensions on the Korean peninsula and to achieve regional peace and safety, we propose to hold high-level talks between the DPRK and the United States," said the spokesman for the North's National Defense Commission in the statement. North Korea's official name is the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK).

"If the U.S. is truly interested in securing regional peace and safety and easing tensions, it should not mention preconditions for the talks," the statement said.

The United States will discuss the new offer in meetings with Japan and South Korea in Washington tomorrow and Wednesday, a senior administration official said.

Washington has been skeptical of any move by Pyongyang for dialogue, as it has repeatedly backtracked on deals. REUTERS

Kim finally gives birth to Kanye's wunderkind

OMG, you guys. It finally happened. On Saturday, Kim Kardashian and Kanye West's superspawn entered the world, thus setting the bar for every future baby to be born, ever. In fact, we might as well just close the book on having babies right now because this was some next-level baby-making.

It's a girl (as was revealed in "Keeping Up with the Kardashians," which you'd know if you watched that show. Which we definitely do not). Both Kim and baby are reportedly healthy and doing just fine.

As of press time, they had yet to reveal her name, but we'd be surprised if it didn't start with a "K." Over/under odds on some variation of the word king? We'd also be surprised if it wasn't something totally wack.

We find it very hard to imagine these two naming their firstborn daughter something reasonable and not designed to elicit WTFs from everyone not crazy, everywhere.

Plus, the Kim K./Yeezy progeny has got a lot to live up to, name-wise, considering that baby will probably spend most of its young life trying to crawl out of Blue Ivy's shadow. (We are still not over the fact Jay and B named a child Blue Ivy, by the way. It's a human being, not a supervillain from "X-Men," for Pete's sake.)

On a side note, what are we all supposed to speculate about on Twitter now that both Ye's album and Ye's baby have leaked? Ew, sorry.

And because all other pop culture news pales in comparison to the birth of Yeezy Jr., here's the rest of your celeb gossip, in brief:

What a gas it is getting old

Tour. We checked out the Stones' Boston show in advance of their stop in our town.

Jagger still has the "moves like Jagger." The Stones will play at the Wells Fargo Center on June 18 and 21.
PAUL MAROTTA/GETTY IMAGES

The Rolling Stones know they're old, and they know you're old, too. During the first few songs in Boston last week, the video screen behind the band showed the faces of fans in the audience at the TD Garden, juxtaposed with montages of screaming teenagers from when the band was at the height of cultural relevance. The live feed didn't capture such youthful frenzy, but the 50 and Counting tour is not about pretending that the audience or the band members — most of whom are in their late 60s — are still young. It's not about denying the passing of time, but celebrating what the band did in that time. Accordingly, the set was mostly comprised of songs that defined those times.

The band had difficulty getting warmed up, after entering the tongue-shaped stage through the giant set of lips that has been their logo for at least 40 of those 50 years. But by the time they launched into their fourth song, "Gimme Shelter," it was intense enough to make the audience almost feel like this was the poignant music of the present.

The band members found their balance, with the intricate parts of the songs fitting together like a jigsaw puzzle. Keith Richards' greatest skill is still knowing when not to play.

The Stones were joined by a handful of special guests, most notably guitarist Mick Taylor, who played on what were arguably the Stones' best albums and quit in the early 1970s. Mick Jagger's voice sounded as vibrant as it has ever sounded on live recordings, and his dancing could have worn out many a younger rocker.

Museum. Mark Laita's photos will have you looking at snakes in a whole new way.

Watch out for the king cobra at "Serpentine." / MARK LAITA

The photographs in Mark Laita's new exhibit "Serpentine," which just opened at the Academy of Natural Sciences, are stunning on a purely abstract level, with bold colors, sinuous curves and strikingly tactile textures. It's almost enough to make you forget just how deadly his subjects are.

"I found I tended to get caught up in the beauty of these creatures when I was behind the camera," Laita says, "and often forgot how dangerous they could be."

Laita, a Los Angeles-based photographer whose work ranges from socially conscious portraiture to glamorous commercial work, spent more than a year in Central America shooting a wide range of snakes in the care of collectors, breeders, zoos and venom laboratories. "All the handlers and collectors were very professional," Laita says of the experience. "I did see a few missing fingers here and there, but mostly everyone I worked with was great."

His portraits of these fanged serpents divorce them from their environment, placing them against a backdrop of stark black. "I wanted to simplify the visual and make it purely about the shapes their bodies create," he says. "For me, this is just a study of form, color and movement. That snakes are connected to so much symbolism makes it even more interesting. Everyone seems to have an extreme reaction — positive or negative — to snakes."

Laita traces his own interest in snakes to his childhood in Detroit. "As a kid in Michigan, I was always catching snakes, frogs and salamanders," he says. "Even where I live now, in California, I've created an environment where the native species of frogs, snakes, newts, etc. can thrive."

A book also titled "Serpentine," collecting these photographs, follows "Sea," a collection of images of sea creatures. But don't expect Laita's future work to follow a similar trajectory.

"I try to push myself to do something different," he says, "to not repeat myself. Now that my last two books featured animals, I'll make sure I steer myself in a very different direction. The variety of subject matter keeps it interesting for me."

Truth, justice and lots of money

"Man of Steel," with Cavill's Superman, made more than a couple bucks this weekend. / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Box office.
Audiences flocked to that movie about a sad flying alien this weekend.

"Man of Steel," the big-budget reboot of the Superman franchise, leapt over the apocalyptic buddy comedy "This is the End," collecting a muscular $113.1 million to lead the domestic box office with the year's second-largest debut weekend and the biggest June opening ever.

The movie, starring British-born Henry Cavill in the first Superman movie released in seven years, carried a hefty budget of $225 million and took in a total of $125 million through yesterday including early screenings, according to www.boxoffice.com.

"This is the End," written by star Seth Rogen and his childhood friend Evan Goldberg, collected $20.5 million at theaters in the domestic market comprised of the United States and Canada, according to studio estimates.

The comedy depicting the end of the world stars more than a dozen well-known Hollywood actors including James Franco, Jonah Hill, Michael Cera and Emma Watson.

In third place, the heist caper "Now You See Me" continued its stronger-than-expected showing with ticket sales of $10.3 million, bringing its three-week total to $80 million.

"The Purge," made for $3 million by the producer of the low-budget "Paranormal Activity" series, finished fifth with $8.2 million, behind the speeding-car franchise sixth film, "Fast & Furious 6," which took in $9.4 million in its fourth week in release, for a total of $220 million since Memorial Day.

"The Internship," a comedy starring Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson based on the antics of nerds in search of a job at Internet giant Google, continued its lackluster box office showing, selling $7 million in tickets to finish sixth.

"After Earth," starring Will Smith and his teenage son Jaden, continued its weak showing at U.S. and Canadian box offices with $3.6 million, in ninth place. "After Earth" did perform well overseas, selling $24 million worth of tickets outside the domestic market. REUTERS

Tip

An old saying goes, "Who is happy? He who is content with his lot." Keep a daily gratitude list of the blessings in your life.

HOW TO DEAL WITH THE GREEN-EYED MONSTER

A former dance teacher of mine used to say, "Don't bother comparing yourself to others. There will always be people better than you, and worse than you. The most important thing is to ask yourself, 'Am I improving?'"

Of course, this is often easier said than done. Not only are we constantly bombarded by advertisements preying on our insecurities, but recent studies show that social media sites actually feed jealousy by creating the illusion that other people are living happier, more fulfilled lives than our own. I say "illusion" because, as a Stanford University study seems to suggest, people often underestimate the discontent of others.

Most of us can expect to encounter the ugly green monster from time to time. And while we may never truly slay the beast, the following tips can help keep it at bay:

The question:

Recently, a lot of my friends are getting engaged, having babies and going on cool trips. Although I'm happy for them, I'm also envious. How do I deal with my jealousy?

Everybody gets jealous from time to time. Focusing inward, not outward, can help alleviate some of those feelings. / WWW.JUPITERIMAGES.COM

1 Acknowledge your jealousy without judgment. Envy is a universal human emotion. The more you can own your feelings, the less likely you'll act on them.

2 Get in touch with the aspiration and wishes underneath the envy. Are you jealous of your friend's trip to Tuscany? Ask yourself what steps you might take to make your own travel plans. It may take time, but setting an intention can point you in a positive direction.

3 Remember that each person has his or her own unique recipe for happiness. Some people prefer roller coasters; others would rather curl up with a book. Being attuned to your own life purpose, needs and accomplishments helps negate the need for comparisons.

4 Instead of comparing yourself to others, compare yourself to the person you were one, five or 10 years ago. Are you wiser, happier, more confident? If so, take pride in your growth. If not, explore what has thrown you off course, or how you can improve your outlook.

How yoga helps you run better

Fitness. Running isn't just about speed. This yoga sequence won't make you run faster, but better.

What happens when you run

Running is great cardio, but it's not very well-rounded, warns Laura Denham-Jones, who teaches a runner's yoga class at Triyoga, London's top health center. "As an exercise that requires you to do a repetitive motion, over and over, some muscles are used more than others. The problem, in the long-term, is that if you have some imbalance in the body, like a weak or tight side or a twist in your pelvis, then you're repeatedly doing that same out-of-sync motion, which will make things worse. Things like your hips and your hamstrings will get tight," she explains.

While it's not so bad to have some tightness in muscles that are supposed to be strong, you'll need to balance out all the work they do. Why? To prevent injury, says Denham-Jones: "If things get too tight, and you then try and do something like increase your stride, you risk pulling your hamstrings. And it's amazing how reluctant runners can be to take time off from their training when they're hurt."

Yoga can help prevent running injuries. / PROVIDED

Sorry, but yoga won't make you run faster. (If that's what you're after, train harder.) But what it does offer is injury prevention through stretching and strengthening the body. "Recovery is crucial," she says. "No one should be training hard seven days a week. Yoga, being a practice that helps to decompress the muscles, will draw attention to any quirks in your body. Restoring muscles back to their original length will enable runners to keep their range of motion and strengthen their body."

Let go of ego

Yoga is about respecting the body: "It creates a body awareness whereby, when you notice when something is painful, instead of pushing through in a macho kind of way, you learn to take things easy so that you can nip injuries in the bud." Another benefit is that, as yoga is done barefoot, you can't rely on shoes to support your ankle: Your muscles are doing all the work, and they'll inevitably get stronger. You're also stretching the tendons and increasing suppleness through the foot, says Denham-Jones.

Pencils down, the ACT is going digital

Tests. Officials are changing the longtime exam.

Whether you're gathering materials for Harvard or your local school, applying to college can be a stressful time for high school seniors. Between applications, extracurricular activities and those pesky standardized tests, getting into your dream school has become a job in itself. However, the ACT makers are hoping to make at least one part of the process a little easier.

In May, the ACT announced that its flagship test will be converted into a digital format in 2015. However, representatives for the exam say students shouldn't put down their pencils just yet. Even after the online test is launched, it will only be available in select high schools before it's available nationally.

Taking tests on paper might be a thing of the past. / WAVEBREAK

Metro talked to ACT Vice President Paul Weeks to find out more about the changes in the exam.

What are some of the differences with the new test?
The first thing is the mode of the testing. It's the first time we'll be moving toward a computer-based administration of the ACT. We'll also be adding some optional constructive-response questions, which give students another way to demonstrate their skills.

What are you hoping will come from the shift to online?
More flexibility for users is the biggest thing. Having efficiency, the incorporation of other kinds of items eventually and more meaningful information that students, teachers and parents can use to know whether or not students are ready for life after high school.

Why would you advise someone to take the ACT over the SAT?
Testing behaviors are very personal. I can tell you that the ACT is a curriculum-based test that reflects the skills that are typically provided by taking good college-prep core courses. And students who have done that tend to be very comfortable with the ACT, because it reflects the kinds of things that they're actually learning on a day-to-day basis.

COURTNEY FOWLER
letters@metro.us

SAT versus ACT

Format

- SAT. Critical Reading: Two 25-min sections and one 20-min section; Math: Two 25-min sections and one 20-min section; Writing: one 25-min essay, one 25-min section and one 10-min section
- ACT. English: One 45-min section; Math: one 60-min section; Reading: one 35-min section; Science: one 35-min section; Writing: one 30-min essay (optional)

Style

- SAT. Questions are often trickier and phrased in ways that make them confusing to decipher.
- ACT. Questions are straightforward, but have the tendency to be longer.

Scoring

- SAT. Total SAT score ranges between 600-2400
- ACT. Composite ACT score ranges between 1-36

Q&A

New and improved

What's the one thing you want people to know about the new ACT?
I think what's really important to mention is what's not going to change. The content of our test is not going to change. English, math, reading and science — these have been the content areas that have been reflected on the ACT, and they will continue to be. The 1-to-36 score scale that teachers, colleges and students have become familiar with will not change. [I asked] my own daughters. Their first reactions were, 'How's test security going to be?' So it reminds me that for every student, taking the ACT is a very personal experience.

New PSAs will encourage students to stay in school.

INGRAM PUBLISHING

Pairing students

This year, "El Poder de Saber" is partnering with City Year, the AmeriCorps program that connects college grads with middle and high school students to help demonstrate the importance of staying in school. Together, Telemundo and City Year will be donating thousands of backpacks to students in Chicago, Dallas, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami and New York.

A new campaign aims to help Hispanic students

Learning. An education initiative focuses on keeping kids in the classroom.

For the last decade, Telemundo Media has been inspiring Latino high school students to stay in school, and it's working.

A study by the Pew Research Center found that the number of Latino students not finishing high school has decreased almost 50 percent since 2000. Of course, the influence to graduate can come from various sources, but certainly Telemundo's "El Poder de Saber," or, "The Power of Knowledge," might have helped with these numbers.

"El Poder de Saber" is an educational campaign that is spearheaded by influential Telemundo Media personalities, journalists and stars. This year, reporter Vanessa Hauc will be the initiative's spokeswoman.

Hauc, along with sports anchor Andres Cantor, journalist Carmen Dominicci and VJ Guadalupe Venegas, will partake in station-wide PSAs that aim to show high school students and their parents the importance of staying in school. Along with that message, they will be encouraging students to think about enrolling in college, too.

The campaign will have some very recognizable colleagues in the 2013-2014 run. The League of United Latin American Citizens as well as the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute, for example, are showing their support for this stay-in-school campaign. In addition, "El Poder de Saber" will join forces with NBC News' Education Nation in New York this October.

Education Nation is a three-day summit hosted by the New York Public Library where thought leaders and media join with attendees to discuss the state of education. The goal of the summit is to improve education for every student by speaking with influential leaders and policymakers.

The nation has seen more Latino students graduating high school and fewer dropping out, but with the help of campaigns like "El Poder de Saber," those numbers might improve even more.

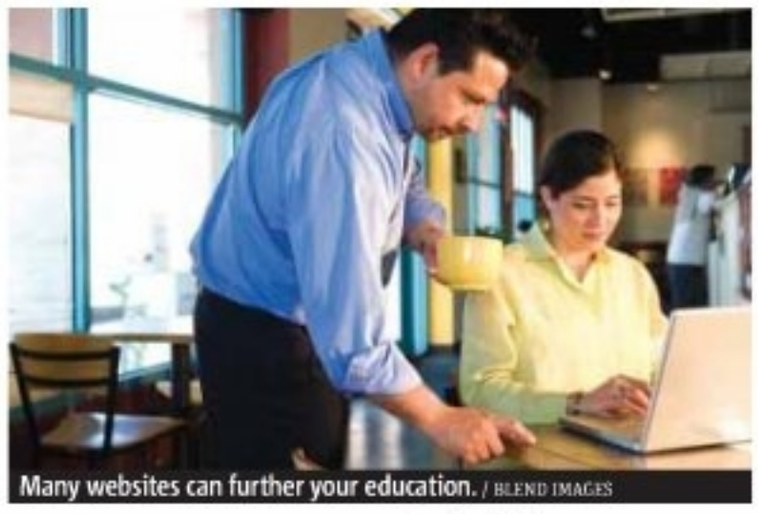
Jobs Advice

DAN SCHAWBEL

DANSCHAWBEL.COM

Dan Schawbel is a Gen Y career expert, the founder of Millennial Branding and the author of Me 2.0.

CREATE YOUR OWN CAREER EXPERIENCE



Many websites can further your education. / BLEND IMAGES

To succeed in the new world of work, you have to create your own educational experience. You need to be a lifelong learner, because the skills that the economy demands are constantly changing. In a new study by my company, in partnership with www.internships.com, we found that 69 percent of students believe it's both their and their colleges' responsibility to be prepared. Colleges can provide you with resources, but you need to be aggressive and tap into them. You also need to be accountable for your own career and leverage the tools and connections in front of you.

Use your college's alumni network

Instead of walking into career services asking for them to review your resume and cover letter, ask them to make alumni introductions for you. You can learn about your desired job and have someone who can refer you to that position.

Use the Internet to find the right mentors

43 percent of students are looking for people to mentor them. Your mentors should be those who have a career and lifestyle that you aspire to. You can find them online using sites like www.linkedin.com and www.twellow.com

Use virtual learning tools

There are many free and paid tools available to you at the click of your mouse. For example, www.udemy.com offers free or low-cost courses on a variety of topics, including social media and product development. The site www.coursera.org offers free courses from more than 30 top colleges.

Use conferences to build relationships

Forty percent of students believe that their reliance on technology has hurt their interpersonal skills, so get out there and meet people in real life. Use www.eventbrite.com and www.conferencealerts.com to find the right events to attend.

Use unpaid internships to get paid ones

About 52 percent of students want better access to internships. The best way to get a paid internship is by taking an unpaid one, proving yourself and using the results to convince a company to pay you.

Working it: John Stemler, brewer

On tap.
Boozehounds, take note: It's hard to take a day off when you're brewing the perfect pour.

You would think that life as a brewer would be a constant buzz. Think of all the beer tasting you would have to do to get the product just right! We spoke with John Stemler, Brewmaster at Free Will Brewing Company in Perkasie, Pa., to find out just how much goes into crafting the perfect pour.

How long have you been at this job?
Since we got our final licensing in January 2012.

When you get to work, what's the first thing you do?
It depends on the day. On a brew day, I get the Hot Liquor Tank going, then grind grains for the first brew. If it's a bottling day, I get packaging ready for the style being bottled. Most of the other days I clean things, transfer beer from one tank to another, then clean something else.

Who do you work with, and what is your relationship with them?
I work with David Wood, the assistant brewer. He is great at picking up my way of doing things and does some of the tedious jobs so I can work on other things. He works well at a brewery because he can tolerate the long hours. We get along because we enjoy some of the same tastes in beer design and flavor. We often joke about ridiculous names for beers. I also work with Dominic Capece, the business and operations manager and equipment whisperer. We don't often brew together anymore, but when we did, it was usually seamless silence since we had brewed together from the beginning. Now, we try and keep him away from brewing so he can man the bottling line and tend to the business. We work well in this business because our talents interlock, and we share both similar and complementary desires for beer flavors.

Stemler often works as many as 80 hours a week. / PROVIDED

Q&A: Community

How do you feel your job changes or affects the larger community?

There is an overwhelming sense of town pride. I have lived my entire life in the town where we are located. We have raised money and donated products to several town organizations. Every little bit helps.

Woods

Exceptional Care Counselor Fair
Wednesday, June 26, 2013
12pm-4pm

Woods is currently looking for Counselors for 2nd (3-11) and 3rd (11-7) shifts campus-wide. We will be conducting on-site interviews for anyone who meets all of the requirements listed below (pre-qualification is required).

Woods' Exceptional Care Model relies on the strength of a highly trained, highly motivated and extremely dedicated team of clinicians, educators and counselors. Woods is the third-largest private-sector employer in Bucks County with more than 1,750 staff at the Langhorne campus. In addition to its program in Langhorne and the surrounding area, Woods has affiliate organizations, Brian's House and Allies, Inc., located in Chester County, PA and 16 counties in New Jersey respectively.

Residential Counselor
- You must be at least 18 years old and have a High School diploma (or equivalency)
- 1 year of verifiable professional experience with persons with intellectual disabilities
- The pay rates for these positions are $10.91 – $11.69 hourly, depending on education level

Staff Counselor
- You must be at least 21 years old and have a High School diploma (or equivalency)
- 12 semester credit hours from an accredited college/university program and 2 years of verifiable professional experience with children
- A Bachelor's Degree from an accredited college/university in human services and 1 year of verifiable professional experience with children
- The pay rates for these positions are $10.91 – $12.67 hourly, depending on education level

The event will be held at The E. Sherman Chase Training Center on Woods' beautiful Langhorne campus, located at Routes 213 and 413. We will be holding interviews from 12pm to 4pm. Only applicants meeting the requirements mentioned above will be interviewed. Every attendee will need to provide a current resume to gain access to the recruiting event. Please come prepared with 3 professional references who are able to verify your experience.

To be considered for an interview, you must apply via our website at www.woods.org by Tuesday, June 25th. Please apply to the link entitled "Exceptional Care Counselor." All applicants meeting the qualifications will be receiving a confirmation email prior to the event with instructions on how to gain entry.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Be prepared to take on a leadership role in a group endeavor.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Don't be too quick to jump to conclusions, because quick assessments are apt to be faulty. If you take time to check out the facts, you'll be on much firmer ground.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Do not expect more from friends and family than they have the right to expect from you. And if you think you'll need maybe you should offer some.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Intangibles are likely to confuse you, because you might not be able to grasp what they're all about. Stick to what you can touch.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Business conditions can be a bit tricky, but as long as you conduct your affairs in a methodical manner, you should still profit.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. Try not to unfairly judge someone you meet for the first time. If given half a chance, this person could be an asset as a friend.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Your concerns regarding a person vital to your current plans will be put to rest. This person's behavior will demonstrate his support.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. To achieve something important, you need to rely only on yourself and nobody else.

Kanye West not a good person

Re: 'Kanye's universe' (Metro, June 14-16) PLEASE STOP with the articles on Kanye West! Every time I see him, I throw up in my mouth a little. He's such a dreadful human being. I'm begging you.

PAUL A. BIBO, VIA EMAIL

I guess the good news is that Kanye West was at Kim Kardashian's side when she gave birth to their baby girl this weekend.

The bad news is that he reportedly grabbed the baby and announced to all present that the award should have gone to Beyonce for producing one of the greatest babies of all time.

BRUCE A. BENNETT, VIA EMAIL

Re: 'Kanye West does not want to hear the sound of your dumb voice' (Metro, June 12) Nowhere in my Bible does it show that Jesus' middle name was "effing." I know there is such a thing as freedom of speech, however that was downright disrespectful.

MELISSA D. CASEY, VIA EMAIL

Open comes up Rose's in Philadelphia

Golf. Justin Rose claims U.S. Open title after Phil Mickelson fades down the stretch at Merion.

Rose won the Open.
GETTY IMAGES

Englishman Justin Rose, one of those often considered the best player never to win a major, finally has a trophy.

On a day when Merion gave little — and took away much more — the 32-year-old Rose proved the steadiest, shooting even-par 70 to win the U.S. Open by two strokes over Phil Mickelson and Jason Day.

As excruciating as another near miss had to be for Mickelson — he'll be second-guessed after electing to chip rather than putt up the sloping 15th green — it was equally as exhilarating for Rose.

Starting the day two shots off the pace, Rose negotiated Merion's narrow fairways and treacherous greens superbly under the pressure.

"It feels fantastic," said Rose, who won at Aronimink in 2011. "Going forward this will give me a lot of confidence, thinking a childhood dream has come true. Doing it on Father's Day is not lost on me. I thought about my father all day."

Kissing the ground he just walked on

Golf. Shawn Stefani hits first hole-in-one ever recorded at Merion Golf Club in a U.S. Open.

Shawn Stefani lost his ball in the clouds.

Then the crowd lost their minds.

"When the crowd went crazy," said Stefani, who finished in 60th place. "I knew it went in."

Stefani hit a hole-in-one on hole No. 17 yesterday during the final round of the U.S. Open at Merion. He's the first golfer to ace any hole at the Open at Merion. This is the fifth Open the course has hosted. It's the 43rd ace in the major's 113-year history.

He smashed the ball with his 4-iron down the 229-yard, par-3 hole. It went over the flag, bounced in and then out of the rough, then rolled 50-feet across the green before it slipped into the cup. Stefani jumped when he heard the crowd.

"I didn't know what to do but jump up and down for joy," he said.

As he approached the green, he dropped to his knees and kissed the spot where it landed. He tipped his cap to the raucous crowd.

"We're in Philly," he said. "There's some great fans up here and I know they can be tough on you and they can love you forever."

This was his second hole-in-one. His first came at Goose Creek Country Club in his hometown of Baytown, Tex. He was 13.

Ironically, the first hole-in-one at the Open was also on a Philadelphia-based club. Jack Hobens aced the 147-yard 10th hole at the Philadelphia Cricket Club in 1907.

Officials from the USGA Museum wanted to save the lucky ball.

"It's hiding right now," he said. "I'm going to save it."

Would he ever consider donating it in the future?

"Depends on what they want to do with it," Stefani said.

He later added, "Well, there's a price for everything."

NBA trade winds are blowing hard

NBA. The Lakers, Celtics and Clippers could make moves that change the league landscape.

As each day passes it's becoming less and less likely that Doc Rivers will return to the Boston Celtics for a 10th season as its head coach.

The Celtics appear set to give up their highly respected coach in exchange for a package centered around Los Angeles Clippers center DeAndre Jordan. Jordan averaged 8.8 points per game and 7.2 rebounds per game last season for L.A., but is believed to have All Star-caliber potential. Jordan was a 2008 second-round draft choice out of Texas A&M and can jump out of the building.

Kevin Garnett is expected to be the other piece of the deal that could accelerate the rebuilding process for Boston. Guard Eric Bledsoe could be the holdup for the Clippers in any potential deal as L.A. wants to have an insurance policy if star point guard Chris Paul leaves the team via free agency on or after July 1.

Paul has recently been linked to Lakers center Dwight Howard as the two reportedly want to play together. An all-Los Angeles sign and trade involving Howard going to the Clippers would likely involve Blake Griffin donning the purple and gold.
